

Cooking it up in Moscow

A delegation of Israeli chefs on behalf of the I.C.C Israeli Chef's Association took part in the International Kremlin Culinary Cup, that was held at the beginning of October in Moscow

The delegation was composed of 9 celebrated chefs, headed by Association President Reuven Harel. Team Captain was Guy Peretz, head chef at the Ashkelon Holiday Inn. The team's ultimate goal in participating was to present the greatness Israeli cuisine to the international culinary scene. "International competitions are an excellent opportunity to display the developments of the Israeli kitchen; through this international gathering of chefs we are granted an opportunity to catch up and acquire inspiration from all over the world," says Chef Reuven Harel.

Team Captain Chef Guy Peretz adds: "I see this competition as an opportunity to demonstrate the professionalism and skills of Israeli chefs. We have been training for some time now and have prepared a number of surprising recipes executed with excellent team work."

In the category in which the Israeli delegation participated and won a gold medal, the task was to prepare a buffet for fifty diners, including a range of tastes and dishes. Each team was given 3 hours to prepare the required dishes that were evaluated by a panel of international judges.
